CRAFTING LUXURY

Scavolini Ki Collection by Nendo

"MY CONCEPT BEHIND THIS KITCHEN IS TO "HIDE" IT WITH A WOODEN SHELF AND WHITE BOWL. I NAMED IT KI, MEANING BOTH BOWL AND WOOD IN JAPANESE. IN ONE WORD IT DEFINES BOTH ELEMENTS OF MY KITCHEN DESIGN."—Oki Sato

Scavolini Ki Collection by Nendo

Scavolini, the Italian purveyor of luxury kitchens for over 50 years, announces the Ki Collection—a new vision for the kitchen and bath. Created in collaboration with Nendo, the Japanese design studio headed by designer Oki Sato, the collection combines Scavolini's renowned craftsmanship with Nendo's unique approach to design. With its refined detailing and elements of surprise, the Ki Collection is nothing short of spectacular.

The concept behind the Ki Collection is to create space and design freedom by "hiding" the kitchen with a wooden shelf and white bowl. Within the kitchen, which includes linear, island and peninsula compositions, containers rest on shelves that function as wall units. With its rigorous interpretation of minimalist and contemporary taste, the collection offers a new way of living within the kitchen area. Combining quality Italian craftsmanship with finely-worked design details, Ki is available in a range of decorative finishes—including three wood-effect nuances—created specifically for Scavolini.
